Mission and Vision Statements

Mission Statement:

International Christian University has held as its mission "the cultivation of superlative individuals, who serve both God and humankind and have been educated as internationally minded citizens, as well as the making of contributions to lasting peace." While striving to fulfill this mission, ICU continues to make tireless efforts to meet the three commitments demonstrated in its name: academic, Christian and international commitments.

Our Academic Commitment

ICU was founded with a mission to pursue truth, defend academic freedom and enrich inner freedom. It cultivates individuals who are able to build connections between fragments of knowledge, create a synthesis of ideas, and contribute to a broad exchange of information that transcends individual fields.

Our Christian Commitment

ICU's commitment to a Christian philosophy enables us to explore and develop all dimensions of the human existence, including the religious.

Our International Commitment

At ICU, people from different nations and cultures live, study and work together, to form an international community. Our academic program reflects a variety of educational visions, with each individual encountering others from different backgrounds.

Vision Statement:

ICU was established shortly after World War II, its founding philosophy embracing a supranational perspective based on deep reflection about the war. Christians from America and Japan started a large-scale fundraising project with hope of establishing a new type of university that would cultivate superlative individuals who would contribute to international society and help build a peaceful and free democratic Japan. ICU was established on land purchased with funds contributed by a great number of people (95% of whom were not Christian), which wound up exceeding the 20,000 Japanese people who also agreed with this vision.

With the aim of educating individuals in the service of the peaceful development of society, ICU was established as a university open to all, regardless of nationality, race, religion or culture. In this sense, in the establishment of ICU is present an awareness of its existence as a university devoted to the promotion of peace.
